

Still in camp. Professor and Dunn measured the wall of the canyon on the east side; Bradley geologising; Howland and Goodman sketching; Rhodes brushing up Kitty's Sister, swearing all the time that she can stand more thumps than Kitty ever could. Professor and Dunn came in at noon and reported the wall 2086 feet. All the party in camp the rest of the day; wind and rain in the evening. Distance from the mouth of Henry's Fork 90 miles; general course of the river 25 degrees south of east. The valley called Brown's Hole is a pretty good piece of land; would make a splendid place to raise stock; it has been used for several years as a winter herding ground for the cattle trains. Last winter there were about 4000 head of oxen pastured in it without an ounce of hay. I saw them in March and am willing to swear that half of them were in good enough order for beef.
